IT consulting firm Kraft Kennedy has announced a new office in the Midwest with a cutting edge forensics lab.

Kraft Kennedy, a leading IT consulting firm since 1988, has announced a new Chicago office, the site of a state-of-the-art forensics lab for its expanding Forensic Technology Services practice. The new location will also serve as a local support base for its Midwestern clientele.

“Our team was thrilled to find a terrific space right in the Chicago loop, and we are very excited to announce that we have been operational as of August 1.” said Michael Kraft, Founder and General Counsel.

Headquartered in New York, Kraft Kennedy also has offices in Houston and Washington D.C. The company provides technology and strategy consulting services to law firms, legal departments, and professional services firms. The opening of the Chicago office, according to Mr. Kraft, is a direct response to the requests of its clients in the Midwest. In particular, the demand for Kraft Kennedy’s forensic and cybersecurity services, which include both prevention and remediation, has risen steeply.

“This new location in the heartland reflects the fact that we help firms all over the U.S. meet their goals,” said Mr. Kraft. “The folks based in Chicago are completely focused on the needs of our clients and dedicated to delivering the extraordinary services we are known for.”
